Part 3

Questions 13-18

Read the text and questions below. Choose the best answer to each of the questions. On the answer sheet, circle A, B, C or D.

Nothing has changed me more than the trips I've taken, the places I've explored and the people I've connected with. While living your normal life, it's easy to lose sight of the importance of getting your head out of the sand and seeing things from a different place. But sadly, most who've never really travelled, don't really see the point.

When I studied and lived with a family for six months in Seville, Spain, I learned that happiness can (and should) be prioritized over money and status. It turned out there was indeed another path.

Seven weeks backpacking around Europe with a close friend (and now business partner) introduced me to a few people who unknowingly convinced me to try working abroad instead of jumping into American corporate life. That seven weeks turned into a year. When I moved back to Seville for that year, as a tour guide and founder of an English teaching business, I learned that, with the right models, inspiration and passion happiness and money could exist together. I never looked back.

Spending weeks around the locals in Botswana, Zambia and South Africa taught me a new form of entrepreneurship and micro business. That a business can be anything as long as you decide to offer value and charge something for that value. It also made me promise myself to not take another moment or opportunity for granted, and to do everything I could to help people and make an impact, no matter how small. Because it's all too easy to forget how much we have at our fingertips. It became a duty to do something meaningful.

And, a few weeks in the Italian countryside with my family (and a few more times since then) planted the idea that one day I wanted to have a business that could be run from anywhere and would allow me to see as much of the world as often as I wanted. That was years before I had my first website. The subconscious is more powerful than we realize – it's crazy what an idea can turn into.

13. How does travelling influence the writer?
 - A. It changes his outlook on life.
 - B. It helps him become more confident.
 - C. He has more friends.
 - D. He has moved to a different place.
14. What is the writer's opinion about doing business after the backpacking tour in Europe?
 - A. He would be most successful working with others.
 - B. Doing business could make him both happier and richer.
 - C. He should focus on making money.
 - D. He wanted to start his own business at home.
15. When the writer wrote I never looked back in the third paragraph, what did he mean?
 - A. He did not like returning to Seville.
 - B. He never returned to Seville.
 - C. He never regretted what he did.
 - D. He remembered nothing about the trip.
16. What does "It" in the third line of the fourth paragraph refer to?
 - A. The business he started
 - B. The duty to do something
 - C. The new form of entrepreneurship
 - D. The time he spent with people in Africa
17. After spending weeks in the countryside of Italy, the writer wanted to start a business that _____.
 - A. could be managed from around the world
 - B. had offices in many countries
 - C. had something to do with farming
 - D. would give him a lot of business trips
18. Where is this passage most likely to be found?
 - A. A guide book
 - B. A newspaper
 - C. A novel
 - D. A personal web blog

Part 4

Questions 19-25

Read the text below about Miss World. Read the questions and decide if each sentence is correct or incorrect. If it is correct, circle T (True) on the answer sheet. If it is incorrect, circle F (False) on the answer sheet.

The Miss World contest is the oldest surviving major international beauty contest. It was started in the United Kingdom by Eric Morley in 1951. Miss World is one of the largest beauty contests in terms of participation and one of the most well-known competitions in the world. Miss World started as the Festival Bikini Contest, in honor of the recently introduced swimwear of the time, but was called "Miss World" by the media.

Opposition to the wearing of bikinis led to their change with more limited swimwear after the first contest. The first Miss World Contest event in 1951 was the first and the last event which announced the winner in a bikini. In Miss World 2013 all participants will use one piece of swimsuit plus traditional sarong from the belly and below as an understanding with local culture.

In 1959, the BBC started broadcasting the contest. The contest's popularity grew with the development of television. During the 1960s and 1970s, Miss World would be among the most watched programmes of the year on British television. Eric Morley died as the competition entered the 21st century. His wife, Julia, continued as chairwoman of the Miss World Organization. The century saw its first black African winner, Agbani Darego of Nigeria, in 2001. As part of its marketing strategy, Miss World thought of a "Vote For Me" television special during that edition, emphasizing the candidates behind the scenes and on the beach, and allowing viewers to either phone in or vote online for their favourites. In 2014, the organization eliminated the swimsuit competition from the contest.

The Miss World Organisation owns and manages the annual Miss World Finals, a competition that has grown into one of the world's biggest. Since its start in 1951, the Miss World Organization has raised more than £250 million for children's charities.

19. The first Miss World contest was held in United Kingdom by their government.
20. Miss World was one of the first popular beauty contests in the world.
21. There was no bikini in the first Miss World contest.
22. People haven't always agreed on the wearing of bikinis in the Miss World contests.
23. The contest started to be shown on BBC channel in 1959.
24. The first black African winner of the contest was in the 20th century.
25. About £250 million has been collected from the Miss World contests to help children with difficulties.
